About Kuban State Medical University

The history of Kuban State University, our alma mater, began on September 5, 1920. Immediately after the establishment of the University, the first rector, Nikander Alexandrovich Marks, a former General of the Tsar’s Army, was elected by the board of professors. He was an outstanding historian and archaeologist, who specialised in systematizing the manuscripts written before the time of Peter the Great. In 1920 the University had 35 professors, 108 teachers, and 16 research assistants. In the autumn of 1921, severe economic constraints due to the country’s financial crisis caused the closure of a number of Universities in the young Soviet Republic, including Kuban State University, which later became the Institute of Teacher Training. With the exception of the Medical Faculty, which became a separate University, the Institute of Teacher Training inherited the mission of Kuban State University, upholding the traditions and principles of Russian education. In 1970, the Institute became a University again.

Accommodation:

• Kuban State University welcomes international students and is generally able to provide accommodation for all new international students without dependants. Students reside at Kuban State University in dormitory rooms. The dormitories are situated on the University Campus. The four room apartments are up to date facilities and offer the opportunity to integrate into the University and interact closely with Russian students. International students live in separate apartments which consist of four rooms. One room is intended for two-three persons.

• The University will give special consideration to cultural and religious needs but cannot guarantee that all international students will be accommodated in single rooms.

• The University also has a limited number of apartments for couples or families with up to two young children which are reserved for international students. Students should contact the International Affairs Department as soon as possible to check on availability.

• For food-supplying the University has some cafeterias, student-canteen and bars. But students can go shopping and cook their own meal which is possible with the facilities provided in the dormitories.

• There is also a Home stay Program for students who wish to experience Russian family life. This experience facilitates language learning and provides direct contact with Russian culture. Families vary in size and composition and can be as diverse as a single child or a couple with two-five children. Students take breakfast and dinner each day with their host family.

• If a student does not intend to be accommodated both in dormitories and in a Russian family the University can offer him/her assistance in finding accommodation in the private rented sector.

• While completing the application form - questionnaire- you should indicate your preferences in appropriate box: whether you prefer living in a dormitory or in a family.
